Arrested for Murder.

GEORGETOWN, Col., Aug 6. Patrick Hackett was arrested last night and lodged in jail for the murder of George Rogers Saturday night.

GENERAL NEWS.

Kentucky Election.

LOUISVILLE, August 6. The Courier-Journal has unofficial but definite returns from about 50 counties, which show about one third falling off in the aggregate vote, but about the usual democratic majority. The republicans have made legislative gains, but the general assembly, that two years ago was one hundred and fourteen democratic on joint ballot, continues democratic by over one hundred majority. Blackburn's majority for governor is variously estimated at from 20,000 to 40,000. Vote recommending a call for a constitutional convention, though supported by both parties, has undoubtedly failed of required constitutional majority. The election was unusually quiet all over the state; no serious difficulty being reported. The greenbackers have elected two members of the lower house of the legislature, but the aggregate vote is insignificant.

Murdered by Indians.

SAN FRANCISCO, August 6. A Tuscon dispatch gives further advices concerning the recent murder of the Shellenback brothers in Santa Rita mountains. The murderers were renegade Apaches, a half dozen in number. They fired on the party from an ambush, the brothers falling at the fire. Mr. Merchant's horse bolted and saved him. Troops from Camp Huachuca are on the trail.

A Conundrum

NEW YORK, August 6.—Gen. Baldy Smith, president of the police board, whom the governor has removed on charges preferred some time ago by Mayor Cooper, is said to be in Vermont, and removal papers cannot be served on him till he returns here. The present question is, can the mayor appoint a substitute in place of Gen. Smith before papers are served.

Conundrum Solved.

NEW YORK, August 6.—John Morrison, Mayor Cooper's private secretary, has been appointed Police commissioner in place of Gen. Smith.

Surplus Labor Coming to this Country.

NEW YORK, August 6.—One hundred and thirty Sheffield cutlers and families have arrived here, and five hundred German and English cutlers are expected. Sheffield men say there are five thousand men there to the work which two thousand can do.

An Explosion.

ALBANY, August 6. This afternoon, while gauging the engine, Sacramento, an explosion occurred killing Thos. Smith and F. Murphy, machinists; and Jno McIntire, fireman, Wm. Horton, fireman; W. Crandell, engineer; and Rufus B. Miller were bruised and scalded.

Jeff. Davis' Legacy.

NEW YORK, August 6. A New Orleans special quotes the Democrat of that city as follows: The accounts of the extent of the estate of the late S. A. Dorsey bequeathed to Jefferson Davis, recently published in northern and western papers are absolutely extravagant. We are assured on the best authority that the estate will not exceed $25,000. Mrs. Dorsey owns three places in Tensas Parish, one assessed at $11,540, three-fifths of another valued at $5,000, and another lying idle subject to overflow, valued at $1,505. Two of these places are rented at $2,250, which constitutes the whole of Mrs. Dorsey's income. On this property she paid according to receipts shown us $492 taxes. Her debts at the time of her death were over $5,000.

Bankers' Convention.

SARATOGA, August 6.—At the American bankers' convention here to day, several important papers were read, including one by Mr. Gibson, of California, on banking in that state.

Among the officers elected for the ensuing year by the American banking association are the following: Vice presidents, Wm. Alvord, Bank of California, San Francisco; Wm. B. Berger, Colorado National Bank, Denver; L. P. Graves, First National Bank, Deadwood; L. H. Hetschfield, Helena, Mont.; Geo. Tafley, Carson City Savings Bank; S. B. Elkins, First National Bank, Santa Fe; H. Corbit, First National Bank, Portland, Oregon; Edward Ivinson, Wyoming National Bank, Laramie City, Wyoming; Dexter Horton, Seattle, Washington territory.

A Market for Our Grain.

NEW YORK, August 6.—The Evening Post has a private letter from a gentleman in eastern Germany, who says there has been few sunshine, but rain nearly every day. The thermometer ranged from 69 to 75. In some places harvesting has begun, but unless they have some warm weather much of the grain must rot in the fields. Adding to this an immense amount of grain and other food crops destroyed by inundations last month, and it looks as if America would be called upon to feed Germany, as well as England and France, next winter.

Commercial.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Silver bars 111¼, silver coin ¼@1 discount; money active 2@6, governments firm; stocks closed strong W. U. 90¾, Pacific 153⅛, Mariposa 105⅛, Wells Fargo 97, New York Central 119½, Erie 28¼, Panama 157, M. P. 79, bonds 109¾ Central Pacific 109¼, Caribou 6¼.

The Yellow Fever.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 6.—Eleven new cases were reported this morning. The city remains remains remarkably quiet and there has been but one arrest during the past twenty-four hours. Rev. Father Fahri, Ed Moon and wife of Chief Police Athey continue to improve. Weather is clear and warm.

WASHINGTON, August 6. The secretary of the treasury has decided to remit all fines and penalties incurred by the Memphis and St. Louis Packet company by carrying an excess of passengers during the exodus of colored people.

MEMPHIS, August 6.—There are 17 new cases in all; ten whites and seven colored were officially reported to the board of health for the 24 hours ending at 6 p. m. In addition to these, five other cases of colored persons sick with fever were brought to the board of health office after the regular report had been made out.

Orange Girl the Victor.

BUFFALO, August 6. Orange Girl won the deciding heat in the unfinished race of 2.22 class. Time 2.22¼.

Business.

NEW YORK, August 6. To-morrow's Public, in place of its usual weekly table of clearing house returns, will publish figures for the entire month of July. Gains are still encouraging; operations of midsummer even more than those of February and March show that resumption has given a great impetus to business throughout the country. The grand total of the month is $3,132,000,000 against $2,583,000,000 in July, 1878. Of all the cities of the first class, Chicago decidedly takes the lead in the proportion of increase, with New York, Baltimore and Philadelphia following. A great part of the gain at Philadelphia was due to the large grain movement, as was much of the increase at Chicago, and it is therefore more satisfactory to find that this city has nevertheless made greater increase than either of its rival eastern cities in other than stock transactions. Business at St. Louis is very large for the season, although it compares unfavorably with the exceptionally large transactions of last year.

Wrestling.

NEW YORK, August 6. The collar and elbow wrestling match for $2,000 between J. E. Owens, of Vermont, and J. McMahon, of this city, was won easily by the latter.

Texas Lawlessness.

GRAHAM, Texas, August 6. The sheriff of Palapino county and his posse had a fight with the Jones gang of horse thieves. Larkin Jones was killed, John Jones wounded, Enoch and old Jones and two other thieves were captured. Jack Morris was left to guard the wounded Jones and assisted the latter to escape. Morris was arrested. Twenty-five masked men overpowered the four guards of Palapino, went to the jail and obtained the keys under threats of burning the jail, and shot Morris dead in his cell.

FOREIGN.

Beaconsfield Reviewing.

LONDON, August 6.—At the lord mayor's banquet at the Mansion House to-night Lord Beaconsfield replying to the toast "Her Majesty's Ministers," said, "when I last addressed you affairs appeared to have assumed a very critical aspect; we were accused of negotiating an entirely impracticable treaty. It was charged that under the pretext of acquiring an Indian frontier we had launched the country into war. This impracticable treaty has been fully executed. Not a single Russian soldier now remains in Turkey, and the Czar has honorably fulfilled his engagements and is now co-operating with England and the other powers in endeavoring to maintain peace. It has been stated that Turkey has not been so faithful in executing her engagements, and that consequently we had not realized reforms in her provinces promised by the Sultan, but it is only just to consider that her domains were only a few days since freed from the presence of the invader and since the signature of the treaty of Berlin, questions more numerous and more difficult in the re-arrangement of Turkish provinces have risen within the same time before any monarch heretofore. I believe the darkest day of depression will have been seen." Lord Beaconsfield insisted that landed property ought to continue as at present. The conclusion of Lord Beaconsfield's speech was received with frantic cheers. Speeches of other ministers referred to local topics.

Congressional Manners.

QUEBEC, August 6.—In the legislature last night, during a debate on supply, Mr. Chaplean called the treasurer a liar, etc., refusing to retract. The premier moved that Chaplean be reprimanded by the speaker. The motion was lost—ayes, 25; nayes, 27.

Another Heavy Fire in Canada.

ORILLIA, Ont., August 6. A fire last night burned about 20 buildings in the heart of the town. It started from the corner of Mascketing and Theater streets, and Griffiths store on the west; and up to and including Albion hotel in the south. Loss, $100,000, partially insured.

The Governor General in New Brunswick.

ST. JOHNS, N. B., Aug. 6 The vice regal train arrived by monitor early to day, but a heavy rain prevented a crowd gathering. However, an address was presented the governor general, and a bouquet to the princess; and each acknowledged the honor in French.

Death of a Well-Known Explorer.

LONDON, August 6.—Keith Johnson, the leader of the expedition to explore the head of Lake Nyassa, died of dysentery on the 28th of June at Berobero, 130 miles inland from Dar-essalain. The expedition will be contined by Thompson, the scientific assistant of Johnson.

Blessed by the Pope.

ROME, August 6.—Signor Gioja, engineer, has explained the Panama canal scheme to His Holiness, the Pope, who bestowed a pontificate blessing on the project. His Holiness hoped the canal would prove morally even more than materially a bond between the old and new worlds.

JOB WORK.
Facilities for Plain and Fancy Job Printing equal to those of any establishment west of the Missouri river.

The democrats in Maine are beginning to realize the fact that they are being absorbed by the greenbackers. In this contest will be illustrated that great doctrine, the survival of the fittest.

The struggle for the national base ball championship is getting exciting. As it stands the Chicagos are first and will probably hold that position—The Providence nine stands second, though closely pressed by the Buffalos and Bostons. The Boston nine now stands fourth, and from present appearances is likely to stay there.

Many Democratic journals in Ohio are beginning to kick against the prominence given to the financial issue by General Ewing. Ewing is finding that he cannot satisfy all parties. If he makes the so-called "free election" issue the prominent one, the greenbackers will support their own candidate. The whole trouble lies in the fact that the democrats have nominated a man who is not a democrat.

We unwittingly omitted to notice the change in the form of the Tribune. We can't say we now like the change because we were so used to the old form, but still it gives the Tribune more of a metropolitan appearance. The editorial staff is a very strong one. Messrs. Rothaker, Dawson and Skiff are all first-class men in their respective positions. The Tribune will still continue under its present able management to maintain its high position among western journals.

The Denver Republican recommends that President Hayes appoint A. B. Cornell to the English mission so as to relieve the republican party of a fight between two factions in the struggle for the gubernatorial nomination. We would remind the Republican that that style of nominations has not been in fashion since March 4, 1877. Men are now appointed to office because they have some fitness for discharging the duties pertaining to it. The office of minister to Great Britain was not created to pension broken down politicians, or to relieve the party of too ambitious statesmen.

It is said that A. B. Cornell bases his claim to the republican nomination for Governor on the ground of his unceasing opposition to president Hayes. He wants the nomination as a vindication. The Auburn Advertiser thinks he "commends himself to defeat in doing this and adds, "There is a general diversity of opinion among men as to the propriety of his attitude in the first place, and there are very few men who believe that the office of governor of the state of New York was created for any such purpose as Mr. Cornell's friends evidently judge it to have been."

Commenting on the fact whether an editor who acts like a blackguard should be treated as such, the Alamosa Independent justly says, "we are of the opinion that the person of an editor is no more sacred than that of any other man, and we rise to remark that some editors, filled with a sense of their own importance, sometimes exceed their functions and go beyond their legitimate sphere to heap odium and abuse upon those who are their equals in every respect, and when the subjects of their wrath and willification unable to endure it any longer, take the matter in hand and deal blow for blow, a howl is raised throughout the land, and all the newspapers in the state are expected to assist in manufacturing cheap sympathy for the poor devil who didn't know how to attend to his legitimate business."

Colorado is for Grant. Register-Call.

All of which is principally blow on the part of the R-C. Isn't it about time Hayes and Bro. Sherman were whipping some of their unruly internal revenue officers into line out this way? Evans Journal.

All of which goes to show that the editor of the Journal would never do for a public officer. A man who has not the courage to express his honest convictions is neither fit to edit a public journal nor serve his fellow man in a public position. The world at large may justly look upon such men as time servers, unworthy of the public confidence. Register-Call.

We are glad to quote the above for it illustrates the status of the administration on civil service reform. The administration don't propose to interfere with office holders' private opinions. Colonel Dorner can advocate General Grant's candidacy without his official head being in the least danger. This is an important change. In 1871 if any office-holder had chosen to express any sympathy with those loyal old republicans, Sumner, Greeley, Banks and Schurz, he would have been turned out of office and hounded out of the party. In 1871 the party lines were so severely drawn that no one was allowed to be considered a good republican unless he expressly endorsed all the doubtful arts of Grant's administration. This was well illustrated in the New York convention, when Horace Greeley fought against certain endorsements of General Grant's policy which he could not in conscience make. For this, after his noble and powerful advocacy of republicanism when many of the Grant republicans were democrats, he was hounded out of the party and to his grave. Now republican organs and officeholders can criticise the administration if they please without materially offending. This is a gratifying change. Nothing is more wholesome than honest criticism from within the party. A party organ now expresses convictions rather than the cut and dried utterances of the machine.

We have been very hopeful from many good indications that Europe would immediately do something toward the remonetization of silver. If Mr. Horace White be a good authority these hopes are unfounded. In a recent letter to the Nation he says: "Having been at some pains recently, both in London and Paris, to sound the depths of the so-called silver movement, I feel justified in saying that there is no such movement that is, no new movement. The resolutions of the Liverpool chamber of commerce were promptly negatived at Manchester, and they never produced a ripple in London. After diligent search in the latter city I could find no movement in reference to silver except a languid discussion of the expediency of bi-metalism in India. Even this, which can hardly be called a silver movement, was extremely faint and inconsequental. In Paris there is absolutely no silver movement except the agitation which M. Cernuschi keeps on foot from his princely residence on the Parc Monceaux. As to Germany, I cannot speak with the same confidence as with reference to England and France not having visited Berlin as yet. I have been informed, however, by persons whose business it is to keep au courant with the subject, that not only has the German government no intention of changing her new gold standard for a bi-metallic one, but such a change is deemed impossible, and therefore not worth wasting words about.

The Indian policy of the government is again to be criticised in eastern circles and it ought to be. The whole trouble is that the government has never had a comprehensive policy in relation to the Indians. The policy has been a "make shift" one from beginning to end. Hardly a single treaty made between 1865 and 1875 now remains intact. The advance of civilization has rendered almost imperative the breaking of those treaties. The Utes in this state have been compelled to yield up section after section of their territory by succession treaties though they were promised that each surrender of territory should be the last. The time has now come when the Indian must be crowded out of Colorado. The government must have foreseen this and in previous treaties should have provided for their removal. The pursuit of a policy like that suggested by General John A. Pope in his paper last year before the social science convention at Cincinnati would have obviated all these difficulties. As it is this state will suffer a great deal of inconvenience during the settlement of this question, the developement of her resources will be retarded, and possibly the lives of her citizens be endangered. All this could have been averted in 1875 by doing what it was clear must be done in a few years, that is remove the Indians out of the state.

Gorham's Defection.

The course of Mr. Gorham in California in abandoning the republican party in so summary a manner, and declaring himself for the democratic candidate, causes much surprise and comment in administration circles. Of all republicans he was the most obtrusive in his comments upon the course of the president in his conciliatory treatment of the democrats, especially of the south. A cabinet officer said to-day that hardly a day passed in the last campaign that Mr. Gorham did not lecture some member of the administration, and not only denounced the democrats in unmeasured terms, but was very severe in his comments upon the president in having anything to do with conspirators and traitors. They now wish to know how he will reconcile his course then with his recent political acrobatic performance. The fact is, the best evidence of Gorham's republicanism is shown by his own course. When the democrats put him out of the secretaryship of the Senate he made several efforts to secure an appointment under the administration; but he had been so officious and almost offensive in his stalwartism that he met with but little encouragement, and after lingering here for a short time left for the 'slope.' His incompetency as secretary of the national committee caused much comment and occasioned him much humiliation among his party friends, and he then evidently meditated a change of political base as soon as he fell out of actual support at the hands of the party. A telegram received here says that his course causes not even a ripple in the party in California; that he has never had its confidence, and he is now an object of quiet contempt amongst the very men to whom he has newly allied himself. They have no confidence in him, and are simply using him for what he is worth." Washington correspondence of Philadelphia Press.

Statistics for New York Democratic Reformers.

The Albany Journal prints some statistics to show the economy of the republican administration of the canals of that state. It contrasts the years of 1862 to 1869, inclusive, when the republicans were a majority in the canal board, with the years of 1870 to 1877, inclusive, when the board was in the control of the democrats. Its discovery is that "in eight years the republican administration paid off $11,466,-000.25 of canal debt, an annual average of $1,430,873; while in the same length of time the democratic administration paid off $2,066,220, an annual average of $258,-277.50." that "the canals cost for the same length of time $5,700,000 more under democratic rule than under republican;" that "the surplus revenues from the canals under eight years of republican rule were $25,277,653 34, or $3,159,706 67 a year, while under eight years of democratic rule they were only $6,644,776 81, or $831,972-[illegible]" and "that the aggregate tolls under eight years of republican rule were $34,437,758 29, or $4,304,719 79 a year while under a corresponding period of democratic rule they were $19,344,340 56, or $2,418,042 57 a year."

GAMBETTA'S BACHELOR FETE.

Senators, Deputies, Ambassadors and Soldiers—This Time Without a Hostess.

PARIS, July 18. Le roi est mort, etc. It is a hackneyed saying, but I could not help thinking it appropriate to the fete given by Gambetta on Monday night. It was the inaugural entertainment of his elevation to the presidency of the chamber, and it was given at the Palais Bourbon, hence the old corps Legislatif. Gambetta is king there now where but yesterday imperialists reigned. The very papers that printed the record of these glories of the new republican regime told us how the poor Prince Imperial looked when he was being coffined for the last time.

Months ago I gave you an outline of what Gambetta meant to do for the revival of official festivity, and it has taken him all this while to do it. It is not his fault the Palais Bourbon had to be restored from basement to attic. It was always very imposing, and now Mr. Joly, the architect of the chamber, has made it almost beautiful with red and white and gold and cherry-colored silks. There is nothing to be described in all this, but everything to be imagined by those who are in any way familiar with the style of modern French furniture and decoration. One great drawing-room follows another, in what if I were a poet I might call an endless line, by which I should mean a suite of five.

There was room enough for all the notables of Paris, and most of them came. It was a fete of reconciliation between the republic and society, and, leaving out the Faubourg, there was little to be desired in completeness. But the Faubourg will come next time now that it sees the republic can do without it. I was unavoidably late, so I had an opportunity of studying the crowd as a whole. The army was in great force; I think I have never seen such a number of uniforms, not even at the Elysee in the Marshal's best days. Gambetta has held out the olive branch to the service and it has been accepted. Even M. de Gallifet was there—the General who slew so many Communists in cold blood and who was thought to be anything but republican till the republic won the toss with the Marshalate after the 16th of May. No doubt he, like many another epauletted friend, would be ready enough to make Gambetta feel the weight of his arm if ever the luck turned against him, but why speculate on these things when the bands are playing, and when a whole palace is lit up with wax and smiles? There is every reason to believe that at least just as many were convinced Republicans—officers whose known loyalty to the Constitution made the Marshal's advisers dread to take the last decisive step. Gambetta has lost no opportunity of conciliating the army all round both by verbal civilities and by the more sincere politeness of an increase of pay. Diplomacy sent General Noyes, Lord Lyons, the Marquis de Molins of Spain, the Swiss Minister and Safvet Pasha the Turk. The Papal Nuncio did not go. I believe it was a cold caught in attending a debate on the Ferry laws that kept him at home. In another category, the Senators, there was one more remarkable abstention M. Jules Simon. There is now no concealment of the feud between him and Gambetta. They show it both by declining each other's invitations and by thwarting each others political plans. Gambetta balked Jules Simon of the presidency of the senate; Jules Simon is leading that illustrious body in what threatens to be a very formidable opposition to article 7 of the Ferry laws. Jules Simon feels that something ought to be done for him, as he was the scapegoat of the 16th May. Gambetta resolves that by heaven's and his own help it never shall. Jules Simon made no pretense of indisposition, he showed himself in a box at the theatre on the very night. But he was hardly missed, there were so many senators and deputies to choose from. Daubigny, De Neuville, Carolus, Duran, Garnier, Ambroise Thomas, Halanzier, Meissonier, Dubois, were only a few of the celebrities of another kind. Gill the caricaturist was there, as he ought to have been, for no man has done more for the republic by exciting to hatred and contempt of its adversaries. The approbation of the Magi or wise men of the East seemed to be secured by the presence of a number of Chinese dignitaries and quaint little figures from Japan lacquered with our civilization in thin layers of black dress coat. A few benighted men were wandering about in "frocks." It was explained that they were "of the people" and had come all this way from distant Belleville, which, in giving its electoral mandate to Gambetta, is the source of all his power. Belleville in the sulks, Gambetta would go down, for it would be taken as a sign of disaffection in the entire democracy; so, to keep in good humor, it is allowed to wear lappets to its coat. How did thought possibly find its symbols before the invention of the philosophy of clothes?

At first I found the salons comparatively deserted, because most of the company were in the great galerie des fetes. M. Gambetta's "Boudoir" in heavenly blue had no occupant. He was sitting in the gallery with the president of the republic on his right and the president of the senate on his left—the senators, the deputies, the ambassadors in other places of honor listening to a concert by the crack vocalists and instrumentalists of the opera or watching a ballet divertissement by children of genius and the same school. Before I follow them it may be as well to say a word on a subject suggested by the mention of the boudoir the total absence of ladies. The very worst use one would think, for a boudoir of heavenly blue would be put to a burly tribune of the people in it. Yet there was really no choice; it was this or nothing. There were no ladies for the simplest of reasons no ladies were asked. Gambetta, being a bachelor, had no one to receive them that was the semi-official reason; the real one was that he did not dare to decide between two or three rival claimants to the honor. 'Twas a pity, for the fete was shorn of more than half its possible splendors, and it was in some sense a mistake. In a country like France perhaps in any country to be conciliating the army, diplomacy and the civil service, and to leave womankind still unappeased, is to begin your work at the wrong end. This protest duly registered we may go into the great gallery and take our humble share of the entertainment. Faure has come from Etretat to sing an air from the "Seige of Corinth;" Mlle. Bilbaut-Vaochelet has come from Douai to sing Gounod's "Dies de Miseldie" with Talazac, who in this country has been picked up from Bordeaux. Mme. Marie Carvalho has her place in the programme. The choruses are rendered in sixty packed pupils of the conservatoire. Following this comes the divertissement, a ballet costumed in the style of the Directory. We are republican, you see, even in our pleasures, and danced to little thin minuet airs of the time. Gambetta looked grimly bored by it, M. Grevy placidly bored, and presently, to their great relief, it was all over, and the throng streamed out of the heated gallery into the drawing rooms and the humid garden.

Under the trees and the arcades playing in the electric light, tents of blue and silver dotted about the greensward, and one of the half dozen bands on the premises doing its best to make up for the failure, "for this night only," of the music of the scared birds. In one huge tent you may sup, and in another corner you may scramble for a regalia, though you are most likely to find nothing but a beggarly account of empty boxes piled breast-high. Our floral bower is kept vacant, and soon we see the reason of it as Gambetta pilots his presidential guest to it as to a place of honor for the enjoyment of the pleasures of this part of the fete. Everyone undercurs as they pass, there is much crowding and the burly tribune, in spite of his skirmishing commissaries in advance, has sometimes to elbow his way through. They are no sooner seated than the band strikes up the "Marseillaise," as the other bands have done whenever M. Grevy came in sight. They discharged this air at him when he appeared at the porch, they are now doing their best to chase him with it out of the garden. No wonder he looked bored. No wonder they both look so, for the tent is immediately surrounded by a part of the curious standing ten deep. They stay there five minutes and try to look as though they relish the music, then when the pretense can no longer be kept up they leave. M. Grevy this time for the door to receive another blast of that patriotic ditty as he drives off home.

He will hear it again before reaching the Elysee, for patriotic revellers are singing in the streets in honor of the anniversary of the fall of the Bastile which was the day chosen by Gambetta for his fete.

THE TUILERIES.

Its Builders and its Burners.

PARIS, July 20. The chamber of deputies to-day, by a vote of 249 to 166, adopted the proposal of M. Proust for the demolition of the ruins of the Tuileries. The site will be transformed into a garden.

Those Zulu assegaies have completed through the fright of a majority in the French assembly a work of destruction begun by the petroleuses of the commune. It was but a few days ago that the committee charged with considering the plans for the rebuilding of the Tuileries approved the restoration of the central palace in its original exterior form out of respect to the genius of two great French architects, Philibert Delorme and Jean Brillaut. And yesterday the assembly, terrified by the specire of a monarchical restoration which has been evoked by the general grief of France and of Europe over the tomb of the Prince Imperial, voted that the building should be completely destroyed and its site turned into a garden.

Philbert Delorme, the chief architect of this historical pile, was a native of Lyons, and was born in 1518. He died at Paris in 1577. He learned his art as a student with a kinsman who built the magnificent Chateau Gaillon in the department of the Eure as the residence of the archbishops of Rouen. It was erected by Cardinal Georges d'Amboise, and it was demolished during the revolution. One of the facades, which was saved by the archaeologist Al Lenoir, director of the repository of objects of art of the Pelits-Augustins, may be seen to-day at the school of fine arts in Paris.

Philibert Delorme was not twenty years of age when he crossed the Alps to study at Rome the monuments of antiquity restored under the Renaissance. In the Eternal City he found a powerful protector in Cardinal de Sainte-Croix afterwards Pope Marcellus.

The young artist devoted himself especially to the study of masonry work and the treatment of stone.

He returned to Lyons in 1536, where he erected buildings the boldness of which attracted general attention by the skillful union which they showed of science with art. Cardinal du Bellay, bishop of Paris, the friend of Rabelais, presented Philibert at court, and commissioned him to erect his own chateau at Saint-Maur, near Paris, of which no traces remain. He was soon appointed architect to the king, Henry II., and became a favorite with the all-powerful favorite, Diana of Poitiers. He had received the tonsure at Rome, it is said, and in his capacity as an abbe he was made a councellor and a royal almoner. He was known at the palace of the Tournelles, then the royal residence in the title of the abbe of Saint-Serge.

The builder of the Tuileries had a quarrel with Ronsard, the poet, and Bernard de Palissy, the potter, growing out of a matter of jealousy. The celebrated author of "La Franciade" wrote a poem called "La Truelle Cassee" (the broken trowel), in which he blamed the king for the benefits he had bestowed on "masons and other low persons."

Philibert revenged himself on the critic by refusing to give the poet the entry to the garden of the Tuileries.

In 1552 Philibert began the construction of the Chateau of Anet, his most remarkable work. The chapel and doorway of this chateau, which are at the School of Fine Arts, are among the finest creations of French architecture. This Chateau of Anet was built by Henry II., who gave it to Diana of Poitiers. The carvings were by Jean Goujon and Germain Pilon and the painting by Cousin. They were all destroyed during the First Revolution.

Jean Brillaut, the collaborator of Philibert Delorme, was an architect, sculptor and engraver. He constructed the pavilions, so well remembered by all who knew Paris as it was before 1871, adjoining the wings of the palace of the Tuileries. The magnificent Chateau of Ecouen, built by the Constable of Montmorency, was his principal work. He also built the Hotel de Soissons, at Paris, of which there now remains only a column built into walls of the rotunda of the Grain Market, and the mausoleum of the Constable in the church of Saint Martin de Montmorency. He had a part, too, in building the peerless Chateau de Chenonceaux, where Mary Stuart passed a part of her happy youth in "fair France," in building the Louvre and in erecting the tombs of the Valois at St. Denis. Jean Brillaut died at Rouen in 1578, a year after Philibert Delorme.

The Palace of the Tuileries, so called from the tile works which were of old time established on the site, was begun in 1564, but was not entirely completed by these two great artists, who labored on it up to the time of their deaths. It was continued under Henry III., under Henry IV. and under Louis XII., and it was finally finished under the greatest of the Bourbon kings, Louis XIV. Dishonored and sacked through the weakness of his unfortunate descendant, Louis XVI., Napoleon made it the central seat of power in Europe through the decade of his terrible supremacy. Mme. De Reminsat paints a striking picture of the evening on which the first consul and his wife took possession (February 19, 1800) of this home of the kings of France and Navarre. When Josephine had supped the first consul turned to her, with the rough pleasantry in which he was father wont to indulge, and said: "Allons, petite creole, venez vous mettre dans le lit de vos maitres."

How many changes it has seen who needs to be reminded? There Louis XVIII. was welcomed back to Paris by the courtiers of the banished caesar. Thence Louis XVIII. fled again before the returning lord of the legions which had conquered Europe. There the drama of the hundred days was played out. There Louis XVIII. died in peace, the last sovereign of France who was to pass away under the roof reared by Catherine of Medicis. Charles X. reigned there, and after him Louis Phillippe. There Napoleon III. was born 1808, and thither he came to dwell as the master of France a generation after all Europe had dismissed the thought of him and his dynasty from its mind as completely as the Middle Ages. There the son was born to him who, now slain by African spears in an English quarrel, sleeps by his side in an English village church. The republic has decided as the commune did that France cannot be trusted to keep her history before her in its monuments, and the Tuileries are to become now a thing of pictures and of the past. But after all it may be doubted whether palaces breed monarchs, or monarchs build palaces, and the frightened deputies who have voted to pull down the walls of a palace have, perhaps, only expressed in the most vivid possible way their secret despair of keeping out a monarch.

There was a very sharp controversy between the counsel for the defendant and the learned judge but no revolvers were drawn.

The Little Pittsburg mining company are on hand with their dividend for July, of fifty cents a share, aggregating $100,000, to be paid on and after the 7th of August, and making the sum total of $800,000 disbursed to shareholders past and present, from this property. Not only does the company pay its regular dividends, but it is expending large sums in buildings and developing the property, and, also, is accumulating a reserve fund,—which is very large. Eclipse.

Mr. Bosworth's card appears in another column and will commend itself to any sensible person. He has an undoubted right to express in a private manner his opinions. Our contemporary knew that the opinions it criticised were intended for private use only, though someone for whom Mr. Bosworth is not responsible made a different use of them. It therefore seems to us that the Mountaineer might well illustrate by example some of the advice it so offensively, and we may add unnecessarily, gave Mr. Bosworth.

Feast of Lanterns for Colorado College.

The following circular has been issued and distributed among our ranchmen:

COLORADO SPRINGS, COL., July 18, 1879.

To the Ranchman of El Paso and Neighboring Counties:

We need your help in finishing the building for Colorado College at this place.

It will take about three thousand dollars more to complete the building now under way, and we must have aid from the friends of education outside of our town. So far as the work has been done it has been paid for, and we greatly desire not to create a debt against the college. The work of the building has been dragging for a year past, but it has been determined to complete it at once.

What we most need is money, but where there are stockmen that have not the money to give and have stock we will be glad to take stock.

On the 14th of August there is to be a meeting at Colorado Springs for the purpose of arousing an interest in the college work and for raising money to finish the building. On the afternoon of that day a sale of any stock that is given will be held. Donors of stock of any kind will please send it to Dr. Elisha K. Kimball, Colorado Springs, Colorado, before noon of the 14th of August.

Several stockmen have already promised donations, and we sincerely hope that our ranch friends will give us substantial aid in this good work.

Subscriptions in money can be sent to W. S. Jackson, Colorado Springs, Colorado.

WM. S. JACKSON,
J. F. SELDOMRIDGE,
IVORY PHILLIPS,
Com. appointed by Trustees to solicit.

From present indications this circular will be very generally responded to. The people of this county realize the value of a good home institution of learning. The day for holding this meeting has been postponed because of the incessant rains. It is to be hoped that the rainy season will be over by the 14th of August.

Mr. Joslyn, chairman of the soliciting committee in this city, told us yesterday that the committees for the various districts in the city would commence work today. We are sure a generous response to their solicitations will be made. This is a work in which every man, woman and child in the city should be interested. The building should be completed for occupation this fall.

A New Enterprise.

Colorado Springs has been more noted for the efforts of some of its citizens towards introducing manufacturing enterprises here than for the success of those efforts. And, in fact, it has been a mooted question with many whether it would not be better to make our fair city exclusively a sanitarium and pleasure resort for the people of other less fortunate climes. On the ground that in this respect they would injure the prosperity of the city, the establishment of smelters, foundries and other manufactories have been strongly opposed, and that successfully too. Which of these two policies it would have been best for our city to have followed it is difficult to say, but it is a settled fact that foundry smoke and lead dust are incompatible with health and pleasure, and it is no less certain that Colorado Springs is securing wonderful prosperity through its fame as a place of resort for the pleasure seeker during the summer and a home for the invalid during the entire year, without the aid of manufactures and other industries.

However, these facts should not and will not prevent the introduction of manufactures, which are unattended with any injurious results to the health of the city. One such enterprise has been located here within a few days past. It is a broom factory, and is located on the southwest corner of Huerfano street and Wasatch avenue. The proprietors, Messrs. Williams & Ashton, are men of experience in this business, being practical workmen at the trade, and, although not having at their ready command a great amount of capital, with plenty of pluck and perseverance, and a thorough knowledge of every branch of the work they have commenced, they expect to build up a thriving business.

It is proposed to make a broom that will stand the dry climate of Colorado, which it is evident no eastern made article will do. In order to be successful in this they will thoroughly dry and prepare the raw materials in this climate before putting them together. And as the handles can be obtained in Chicago all ready for use, and there being but little waste in the brush, the freight is less than it would be on the ready made article. From this fact it is expected that a broom can be made here at the same cost that it can be made and shipped here from the east, and there can be no doubt but that it will be a much better article for Colorado use.

These gentlemen get their broom corn from Atchison, Kansas, they use a varnished maple handle, the best tin-covered steel wire, and anyone, by taking the trouble to go to their establishment, can see the work done and see that it is done well. They have already made and sold to our merchants several dozen brooms, and can easily turn out from three to four dozen brooms per day. They expect to carry on a wholesale business entirely, and hope by fair dealing and by making a superior article to supply at no distant day the entire Colorado trade in this article.

Hop at the Beebee House, Manitou, last night.

A Card from Mr. Bosworth.

To the Editor of the Gazette:

In order that those who have read the article in the Mountaineer of the fifth headed "Bosworth's Epistle," may not be misled I make the following statement: In regard to the letter itself, it was written by me and addressed to my father, who without my knowledge turned it over to the editor of our home paper. The opinions therein expressed were expected to be understood as [illegible] has a right to a private opinion. I have never publicly expressed my opinion in regard to the railroad controversy, but in my private letters I shall continue to express my opinions without restraint, and when by accident one of these letters falls into the hands of the editors of our papers I would prefer it to be criticised as of a private nature and not as public. The part I took in this controversy was ordered by those high in authority in the W. U. Tel. Co. Copies of telegraphic orders issued me from headquarters can be seen by the editor of the Mountaineer or other doubting parties at my office. They were followed to the letter. They would have been followed as strictly had the positions of the D. & R. G. and A. T. & S. F. roads been reversed, as regards tampering with the W. U. wire. No personal feelings influenced my course.

G. A. BOSWORTH,
Manager W. U. T. Office.

Washouts.

The train was delayed two hours last night on account of a washout between Little Buttes and Pueblo. As there were also washouts on the Atchison road there was no eastern mail. We understand there are also serious washouts between Pueblo and Canon City, and that no trains have been run since Tuesday.

Another Picture.

The following from the Leadville Chronicle is one of the many experiences which are not published, and which fortune hunters should consider: "Seth Hill tells his own story. He says that he came to Leadville from Independence, Missouri, four months ago, for no other purpose than to become wealthy. He wanted to go back the next morning after reaching camp, but his money had given out on his way in, and he thought he h'dn't better go; but in company with an an old miner went up on Big Evans and began to dig a hole in the ground. He has dug every day since up to yesterday, Sundays and all, used up two hundred dollars sent on by his Missouri friends, and this morning sold his one hundred and eight foot shaft to New York capitalists for five dollars and a pass over the Santa Fe road from Pueblo to Kansas City. He will walk from Leadville to Pueblo, and from Kansas City to his old home at Independence. It is customary to report big sales. It sounds well for the camp. But few of the many transactions like the above are spread before the public."

Personal.

Mr. A. W. Archibald, a prominent attorney from El Moro, is in the city.

We acknowledge a call yesterday afternoon from Dr. D. P. Robbins, proprietor of the Union City (Pa.) Times.

Rev. Dr. G. C. Lorimer lectured to the young men of Leadville, on Monday night, in the Presbyterian church.

Mr. H. M. Rhoads is in the city in the interests of the Denver Tribune. He expects to go as far south as Las Vegas, New Mexico.

Harry McMillen, son of the proprietor of the Central Hotel, left yesterday for Granville, Ohio, where he will attend the Denison University.

J. M. Coplen of Florissant called yesterday morning for the purpose of continuing the regular weekly visits of the GAZETTE to his home.

Frank Greenwood, one of the most capable and popular engineers on the D. & R. G. road under the old management, has opened a drug store in Seneca, Kas.

Dr. W. D. Marlow of Flora, Illinois, has opened an office over Mr. Barker's store. The doctor comes very well recommended. He brought his family with him and expects to buy property and make this his future home. Mrs. Marlow's mother, who is with them, has already purchased property in the city.

The controversy in regard to the Robert E. Lee mine has finally been settled and Messrs. Crowell, Howbert, Humphrey and Sigafus of this city and J. Y. Marshall of Leadville have now the undisputed possession. We are glad to record this. The mining property is very rich, and we are glad it has fallen into the hands of the above named gentlemen. We consider this a benefit to the city, as the gentlemen are public spirited and have broad ideas. Some of this money will be undoubtedly invested in public improvement which will add to the attractions of this city.

Captive Cheyennes.

Miss Lizzie English, in a newspaper article, gives the following account of the captive Cheyennes who made the raid through Kansas and Nebraska last fall, which is still fresh in memory:

"The accompanying illustration, giving the only portrait ever made of this little band of Northern Cheyennes, who are the only survivors with the exception of sixteen squaws and children, of the famous raid through Kansas and Nebraska in the fall of 1878, cannot fail to be of general interest, inasmuch as they are about to be tried for their lives. These Indians were taken from their northern homes to a reservation in the Indian territory. They remained there for a season but became dissatisfied on account of the quality of food which was issued to them. The young men called a council and rehearsed their grievances at a "talk," the result of which was a determination to make a bold break through this new thickly settled country to their old hunting grounds in Dakota. The band consisted of about seventy-five braves with their families who had the hardihood to make the determined and dangerous effort. It will be remembered that the trail which they took from the Cheyenne agency was in a northeasterly direction, crossing the Red Fork about sixty miles distant, keeping the same direction and crossing the Arkansas river about twenty-six miles west of Dodge City, thence due north crossing the Kansas Pacific railway near Carlisle station, continuing northeast to the head waters of the Solomon near Sheridan, twelve miles west of which place occurred the terrible massacre.

From this point they made a forced march with their squaws, children and ponies; crossing the South Platte to Ogalalla, thence to the North Platte sixty miles beyond where they were captured by a detachment of the Third and Seventh United States Cavalry. The gallant Colonel Lewis who led the troops in pursuit fell mortally wounded on Punished Woman's Fork. The Indians made their last camp on a stream called Running Water, and the fight at which they were captured occurred on what is known as the sand hills.

The children were spared but nearly seventy whites, many of whom were women were killed. Contrary to the general expectation of those frontiersmen who are most familiar with the Indian character only one woman and a girl barely twelve years of age were outraged. It is beyond the power of any one who has never witnessed any of these "blanket" Indians on the war path in all the hideousness of paint and feathers to appreciate the feeling of terror which seemed to pervade the hearts of the settlers along the Sappa and Prairie Dog as the yell and war-whoop rang through these peaceful valleys of Northwestern Kansas. The subsequent capture and imprisonment of this band at Fort Robinson, Neb., their desperate attempt to escape, which came so near "rubbing them out," as the Indians themselves term it, with the returning of the remnant to be imprisoned at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, afterwards being taken to Fort Dodge for trial, must still be fresh in the minds of our readers.

There has probably never been a band of Indians who have paid such a terrible penalty for their temerity as this party of Cheyennes.

These seven warriors, who, on account of their old age were not admitted to council with the young warriors, and had given up the chase and war path long since, were captured with the squaws and ponies.

In conversing with the writer they plead their cause eloquently in their native tongue. Wild Hog saying, 'We are not warriors; we have not fought for many frosts. Our young men did the fighting, but they are all dead.' They speak of 'Dull Knife' and his band of Cheyennes who are still at large, as a bad Indian who should be here in their stead, saying that they are accused of his deeds.

They speak freely to their interpreter, Mr. Amos Chapman, who en passant is regularly in the service of the United States as such, and is living at Cantonement, Indian Territory. He is well known throughout the southwest, having been in the service of the government as scout and guide since 1866. His bravery and tact in Indian warfare have never been questioned. In one instance, while on a scouting expedition for Gen. Miles he was held with four others for four days and four nights in the holes which they had dug with tin cups for protection, without food or water. The Indians engaged in this instance were Cheyennes, Kiowas and Comanches, to the number of one hundred and ninety-five. The scene of the conflict was in what is known as the Pan Handle, between the Washita river and Gageberry creek, and at the hands of his red brethren he sustained the loss of his right leg from a bullet wound. He has been with Miles and the lamented Custer in some of the worst Indian fights on record. Hardly a foot of ground lies between the Red river and the El Llano Estacado but that he is perfectly familiar with.

These Indians are indicted for crime alleged to have been committed by them, and the trial was set for the term of the district court now in session at Dodge City. In accordance with a change of venue these Cheyennes have been taken to Lawrence, Kansas, to be tried by a special term in that district. The examination will necessarily be conducted through an interpreter and Mr. Chapman will no doubt be assigned to this duty, as he accompanied the troops who followed these Indians during this memorable raid. Their names in Indian and English and their ages are as follows:

	Age
Om-mus-e can-eam-ma-me ha (Frizzlehead)	42
Om-mo-en (Left Hand)	41
Ame-im-e-at (Run Fast)	50
Ma-ha-kis (Old Man)	68
Mut-tah-vic-kis (Old Crow)	53
Ec-ce-ce-tah (Wild Hog)	56
Vic-kis (Porcupine)	53

In the case of "Old Crow," a nolle has been entered and he will be returned to the Agency. The remaining six are being cared for by U. S. Marshal H. S. Clark, awaiting trial. At present they are confined in the Douglas county jail.
